Seymour is one of the industry's most respected editorial leaders, and most recently served as the Editor-in-Chief for Marie Claire magazine. Under her direction, Marie Claire received a National Magazine Award nomination for General Excellence in 2006.

"I'm thrilled to have the opportunity to edit a magazine whose readers share an incredible passion for life after age forty," says Seymour. "As a long-time reader and writer for More, I have always admired the incredible style, confidence and intelligence of the editorial product. I'm looking forward to building on More's tremendous success and connection with this vibrant audience of outspoken women who want to change the way the world looks at midlife."

Her experience in the women's lifestyle field includes serving as the Editor-in-Chief of Redbook magazine, where she repositioned the magazine and developed new editorial programs and features. She also guided Redbook to a National Magazine Award nomination for Personal Service for its comprehensive Breast Cancer Medbook, What to Do When You Find a Lump.

Seymour's editorial experience also includes serving as Editor-in-Chief of YM; Beauty Director of Glamour, and contributing editor at Vogue. She is also the author of two books: On the Edge, 100 Years of Vogue and I Wish My Parents Understood.

Meredith launched More in September 1998, and the magazine has steadily grown in advertising pages, revenue and circulation. In calendar 2007, More's advertising pages increased nearly 20 percent. More's robust programs and initiatives that bring the brand to life include: the More/Wilhelmina 40+ Model Search, currently in its eighth year; the four-year-old More Marathon; and the recently launched More Reinvention Convention.
