NEW YORK, May 6, 2021 /PRNewswire/ -- Today at the IAB NewFronts, Meredith Corporation (NYSE: MDP), the nation's leading food, lifestyle and entertainment media company, reaching nearly 95% of American women, unveils its new slate of premium programming informed by insights from its rich, first-party data and predictive intelligence capabilities. The company will also present at the IAB Podcast Upfronts on May 12.

Creating more ways for consumers to engage with its celebrated brands, Meredith is introducing video series, including Ayesha Curry's One and Done and Entertainment Weekly's Wonder Women, podcasts such as PEOPLE in the '90s and new OTT and social programming aimed at the 86% of millennial and 69% of GenZ women it reaches across platforms. In partnership with the Association of National Advertisers' SeeHer movement championing women, Meredith reveals SeeHer: Multiplicity and a portfolio-wide new franchise called She Rises as part of its content slate, underscoring its commitment to diversity, equity and inclusion.

"Meredith serves the fundamental needs and passions of American women, many of whom are primary household decision makers. The enormous demand for our food, parenting, health, home, lifestyle and entertainment content and experiences across our channels demonstrates how in sync our brands are with our massive audiences today," said National Media Group President Catherine Levene. "We're proud to participate in both the NewFronts and Podcast Upfronts, two marquee industry events that reflect our commitment to innovative digital content and production across platforms."

Meredith's digital engagement rose 16% and video views across owned-and-operated sites climbed 45% year-over-year from January through December 2020, according to Google Analytics. At the same time, Meredith's content drove over $1.2 billion in retail sales from our shopper and e-commerce capabilities.

The company is introducing the Video Accountability Suite, a variety of measurement tools aimed at proving video advertisers' performance.

"Measuring lift for advertisers and their positive campaign results across our video programming is a significant Meredith offering. Our new suite of measurement solutions demonstrate advertising impact against their chosen KPIs, including brand awareness, purchase intent or driving retail sales," said Alysa Borsa, President of Meredith Digital. "We continue to double down on employing our rich, proprietary first-party data and insights, which enable us to understand and predict trends. This process – which we call Insights & Imagination – is the engine behind this new premium programming slate. It results in empowered audiences, while also allowing marketers to integrate into our premium, brand-safe environments, including shoppable video."

"We are fueling viewership across our O&O properties and expanding audience growth across OTT, social channels and voice," Meredith's new Digital Chief Content Officer Amanda Dameron added. "Podcasting is immediate and intimate. It creates a unique space for an authentic, unguarded exchange of ideas and is perfectly suited for our brands."

Highlights of new Meredith programming include:

- One and Done with Ayesha Curry – PEOPLE
Founder of Sweet July magazine published by Meredith, bestselling author, lifestyle expert and super foodie Ayesha Curry shares her favorite "one pot, one pan" recipes in this new cooking series designed for busy people.
- PEOPLE in the '90s – PEOPLE
Hosted by PEOPLE's Deputy West Coast Editor Jason Sheeler and Style & Beauty Director Andrea Lavinthal, PEOPLE in the '90s is a podcast (and accompanying video series) launching June 3.
