Investopedia Unveils Winners of its 2022 Best Robo-Advisors Awards

Wealthfront, Betterment, and M1 Finance among top honorees

NEW YORK, March 1, 2022 /PRNewswire/ -- Today, Investopedia (www.investopedia.com) announced the winners of its 2022 Best Robo-Advisors Awards, recognizing the best digital advice and financial planning platforms across categories including Best Overall, Best for Beginners, and Best for Socially Responsible Investing.

Investopedia completed an unbiased, comprehensive comparison of more than 20 robo-advisors for this year's awards.

Millions of new investors who joined the markets in 2020 and experienced consistent returns through 2021 are discovering the value of financial planning and advice amid ongoing volatility in 2022. For this year's Best Robo-Advisors Awards, Investopedia completed an unbiased, comprehensive comparison of more than 20 robo-advisors to determine which provide the best solutions and experiences for investors. The winners enhanced their platforms with products and features to meet increased demand by investors for education, tax planning, and diversification.

"As investors have become more demanding of the digital platforms they use to invest and manage their money, robo-advisors have had to step up their offerings in the past year," said Caleb Silver, Editor-in-Chief of Investopedia. "Our 2022 Best Robo-Advisors Award honorees rose to that challenge by offering more diverse portfolios, improved tax-loss harvesting capabilities, and other features investors want during this time of market uncertainty."

Winners of the Investopedia 2022 Best Robo-Advisors Awards:

- Best Overall: Wealthfront
- Best for Beginners: Betterment
- Best for Low Costs: M1 Finance
- Best for Mobile: E*TRADE Core Portfolios
- Best for Goal Planning: Wealthfront
- Best for Portfolio Construction: Interactive Advisors
- Best for Portfolio Management: Personal Capital
- Best for Cash Management: Betterment
